Group instills idea that it's OK to talk

"Our lives begin to end the day we become silent about things that matter."

- Martin Luther King, Jr.

By RICHARD SITTS
The Chronicle-News

When a talented 23-year-old athlete, surrounded by an NFL team and support staff, can take his own life while showing no outward signs that he is in trouble, it's a serious problem. On Sept. 20, Denver Broncos wide receiver Kenny McKinley shot himself in his Denver home. The second-year pro out of South Carolina was on the injured reserve after sustaining a second injury in his young professional career. Afterward, friends and teammates surmised that he could not imagine what he would do if he couldn't play football. Yet, no one was able to prevent this sad and tragic end to a promising life. (For a touching, personal take on McKinley's death, go to denverpost.com and read sports columnist Woody Paige).

Perhaps as little as a single phone call could have helped McKinley, or anyone else who may be contemplating suicide. That is the bedrock message being put out by safe2tell, a prevention initiative program just being introduced at Trinidad State Junior College.

The organization's motto is, "Make a call. Make a difference." That dictum was pounded home by the organization's founder and executive director, Susan Payne, during a presentation in the Pioneer Room on the TSJC campus last Tuesday evening. TSJC is one of three Colorado junior colleges that is adopting the program, that is intended to help prevent suicide, bullying, assaults, child abuse, domestic violence, harassment, hate crimes, animal cruelty, vandalism, fighting, and other problems that sometimes face young students.

Earlier this month the Denver Post reported that Colorado typically has one of the highest suicide rates in the nation, with 940 deaths by suicide in 2009.

Miner Golf team repeats as Southern Region Champs

By DAVID J. SANTISTEVAN Jr.
The Chronicle-News

For the second year in a row the Trinidad Miner golf team captured the Class 3 Southern Regional team Crown with a 17-stroke win over second-place Rye.

"We played well overall," Miner Head Coach Mike Vecchio said. "The kids have worked hard all year. We came into regionals with somewhat of a target on our back. The other teams really played their best golf against us, and our kids played at a high level. It makes us better."

The Miners' accumulative score of 226 was more than enough, beating out Rye (243), TCA (244), and St. Mary and Monte Vista, tied for fifth with 250 each.

Miner sophomore Blake Young shot an even par of 71 for a third-place finish. Young shot a 34 on the front nine and a 37 on the backside. Vecchio added, "Blake has been hitting the ball pretty good as of late. His game keeps improving."

Garrett Schrepfer came in fourth with a 2 under par 73. Vecchio added, "Garrett hit the ball well all day; he is starting to put his game together."

Carlos Sisneros shot an 82 and Bret Dixon shot an 83. Both finished in the top 15.

"It's good when you have kids that can pull the others up. We have that on our team. If you have a bad round, you know that your teammates will be there to pick you up," Vecchio said. "Our kids are confident and willing to work to improve. We will work on some things and get ready for the state tournament."

Last year THS were runners-up to Class 3A powerhouse Kent Denver and just ahead of this year's host, Eaton.

The State Tournament begins on Oct. 4 at the Eaton Country Club.

German quilters travel to Raton rendezvous

By TIM KELLER
The Chronicle-News

RATON - It turns out that quilting is a universal language.

After a decade of long-distance correspondence, nine German women traveled all the way to Raton for a weekend filled with sightseeing, visiting, and – most importantly – sharing quilting materials, techniques, and stories with their Raton counterparts in the Willow Springs Quilt Guild.

Nine of the 10 members of the 1st Franconian Quilt Club made the two-week trip from their homes in Bavaria. They celebrated the opening Saturday, Sept. 18, of a month-long quilt exhibition at the Raton Museum. They attended the Raton Arts & Humanities Council's presentation of the Argentine dance entertainment "Rhythm & Passion" at the Shuler Theater that night.

They toured Capulin Volcano National Monument Sunday before repairing to the Capulin home of Beverley and Dale Mark for that great American pastime, the outdoor summer barbecue. A cacophony of voices in broken English was frequently punctuated by laughter as the German and New Mexican women found plenty of ways to communicate.

The meeting led to a friendship between the two families in which the daughters have traveled to visit each other and the parents bonded over quilting, among other things.

That meeting led to a friendship between the two families in which the daughters have traveled to visit each other and the parents bonded over quilting, among other things.

The meeting of the two groups was 10 years in the making.

Beverley Mark was a founding member of the Willow Springs Quilt Guild when it formed in 1999. The following year, Gisela Marquardt helped found the 1st Franconian Quilt Club. Plans began to shape up for a get-together.

"When I joined in 2005," recalled current Willow Springs President Sara Kowalski, "Beverley, who was president then, said this group of German quilters was going to visit us...in 2010!" It seemed so far away as to be beyond reckoning.

The quilt sharing they planned turned into the current show at the Raton Museum. The gals exchanged photos and planned for the big weekend. The Raton women arranged for the Germans to find goodies when they arrived at their motel rooms, and gave special tote bags as well; in return, they received handmade pillows from the German women.

The visiting quilters from Germany got out for some exercise on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 19, as they trekked the one-mile rim trail around the top of Capulin Volcano, about 30 miles east of Raton. Capulin is one of the best examples of a cone volcano left in the world.

The 1st Franconian Quilt Club flew from Nuremberg to Frankfurt, where they caught a 10-hour nonstop flight to Denver. They rented two cars, a Chevy Suburban and a minivan, enough space to carry lots of suitcases to carry home lots of quilting fabrics.

Besides the police captain, their numbers include three nurses, a doctor of biology, a university office worker, and three retired women.

They've continued on from Raton to visit Santa Fe, Taos, Durango, the Four Corners, Canyonlands, and Grand Junction before returning home via the Denver airport. They've scheduled visits to six quilting shops along their way, and they're suckers for any fabric stores they find along the way.

"It's amazing how quilting can bring together people from different countries who have little else in common," Marquardt remarked. In the Mark's yard, laughter broke out over the differences in their tastes in colors and fabrics.

The visiting Bavarian quilters included Ines Barrabas, Sonja Fees, Gaby Pfeiffer, Petra Klöppel, Gabi Hartmann, Barbara Roggenthin, Maria Adam, Brigitte Wagner, and Gisela Marquardt.

It wasn't hard to find them in Capulin. They were in the big yard festooned with hanging quilts of many styles and colors, where laughter escaped over the fence and it sounded the same whether it was in English or German.

Group instills idea that it's OK to talk

"We need to be proactive and know it's OK to speak out," Payne told TSJC students and staff. "The best protective act we have is prevention." In more than 80 percent of violent incidents in U.S. schools, somebody else knew it was going to happen, but failed to report it, Payne said, according to the U.S. Secret Service. A study revealed that of those kids who did know that something was going to happen, 96 percent said they did nothing to dissuade them from carrying out their act.

One of safe2tell's goals is to help create an environment in which it is OK for kids to speak out and talk to others, namely adults, about what they have heard or know. "Kids have to feel comfortable telling adults information. You have to tell someone who will take it seriously and follow through," she added.

In severe cases in which students take guns to school, there are warning signs. Potential shooters or attackers make plans and like to tell others about their plans, Payne said, adding that there is no consistent, reliable profile of those kids who might try to carry out such an act. However, student attackers often have easy access to guns.

In Colorado, at least 28 such attacks have been prevented since Columbine happened 10 years ago. In these cases, school staff are the first responders. "Being proactive and being prepared is the difference between success and failure," Payne said. Bullying is often a factor and is problematic behavior, she added. "If we can identify a kid as being a bully, we have to stop it," Payne said. Bullying is spurred on by a "pack mentality" and unchecked cyber bullying also has led to a young female student taking her own life.

School shooters are often suicidal, as were the two student shooters who shot and killed 12 classmates and a teacher at Columbine High School before taking their own lives.

Payne related a true story that took place in a Jefferson County school. A sixth-grader brought a gun to school and showed it to 10 different students throughout the day. No one said anything, but fortunately, no one was injured that time. Payne then showed a video public service announcement whose tagline was, "Regretting is harder than telling."

The safe2tell mission consists of education, awareness, early intervention, prevention, accountability and follow-up. Sharing information among law enforcement and school staff is essential and dialog is critical, Payne said. Another goal is to decrease the dropout rate among students, as half of dropouts end up in the criminal justice system, she added.

Another goal, she said, is to "break the code of silence." Concerning potentially violent events at schools, staff need to train for "not if, but when," Payne said.

Sometimes, a threat can come from outside, rather than from within, as in the Sept. 27, 2006, death of Emily Keyes, 16, who was shot and killed by a gunman who entered her high school in Bailey, Colo.

Payne also mentioned the March 21, 2005, home and school shooting at Red Lake, Minn., during which a student killed 10 people, including himself. This happened after the school had spent "a fortune" installing metal detectors and other security equipment.

Moving on to other potential problems, Payne asked if a kid who is unconscious from alcohol consumption warrants a 911 call. When not reported in time, such incidents have resulted in death.

"Sexting" is another social problem that safe2tell can help squash. "A few years ago, that wasn't even a word," Payne said, adding that she recently spoke to a class of fourth graders and 80 percent of them had their own cell phones. Referring to submissions made on popular social websites such as Facebook or MySpace, Payne said, "Once it's out there for the world to see, you can never take it back."

Jessica Logan, an 18-year-old student about to graduate in Cincinnati, sent a nude photo of herself to her boyfriend and the picture ended up going viral. She was unmercifully teased and eventually ended up going to the local media and telling her story, imploring other kids not to make the same mistake. Two months later she hung herself.

Payne threw out some other statistics:

■ Suicide is the second leading cause of death among college students, behind automobile accidents, and third among all youth, ages 15-24.

■ In Colorado, suicide is the second leading cause of death among youth, ages 10-24.

■ 20 percent of all high school students report having seriously considered suicide during the previous 12 months.

"If you know someone who's not accepting a (romantic) breakup, they are at risk," Payne said. "You need to tell someone." The number one thing that kids need, she added, is "a caring, committed adult in their life."

The bottom line is that all the types of tragedies mentioned above can possibly be prevented by talking and safe2tell is out to help facilitate that potentially life-saving communication.

For information, call 1 (877) 542-SAFE (calls can remain anonymous), or go to www.safe2tell.org. Anonymous reports also can be made on the website. Safe2tell is funded entirely through donations, fundraising and grants.
