SCRT Spring Theatre academy — Helping area kids expand their horizons

By Cynthia Berresse Ploski
Art Correspondent
The Chronicle-News

Some lucky duck will get to play Puck! That's the midwinter desire of many students signed up for SCRT's Spring Theatre Academy program, leading to a full scale production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer's Night's Dream" in mid-spring.

For these students, it will be a theatrical dream coming true.

After a series of Saturday morning classes in acting, design and construction, rehearsal techniques and performance, this multi-generational group will go from study into rehearsal mode, converting SCRT's Famous Performing Arts Center stage into Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" woods on April 17-20 and 24-26.

First day participants in the SCRT Spring Theatre Academy pay attention to their Director Harriet Vaugeoise, right. Theater adventures have a great way of helping kids expand their horizons and broaden their goals in life. Comedy and tragedy played out on the stage offer kids the opportunity to experience life in a variety of ways before entering the real world.

attending Director Harriet Vaugeois' first Saturday class on January 3, will be transformed into lovers and fairies, an amorous donkey, and the mischievous Puck by the time Opening Night arrives.

What a wonderful opportunity for the kids to learn life skills in a fun way. They will learn to work together with a "family" of other kids and grownups to achieve a wonderful result—a famous play to present to the Trinidad public. It's the real deal.

Participants will have to memorize lines, a skill that will develop brainpower, helpful for acing tests in school and staving off dementia in old age. They will have to follow instructions, (very helpful for impressing future bosses or current teachers.) Here are a few more life skills, among a long list of positive results from participating in the-atre classes:

— Respect for other people, responsibility, resourcefulness, attention focus, punctuality, helpfulness, versatility, language skills, motor skills, trust, cooperation, creativity, reliability and expanding worldview, among others.

Presumably, the adult students have already learned these skills—but will be adding a few new ones, including working with children on a collaborative level.

Happy Ending: Lost dog, owner reunited

By Steve Block
The Chronicle-News

The small Pekingese dog found wandering around on Interstate 25 right after Christmas has been reunited with his owner. Irma Albinana of Fort Collins, who found Society, but was told they couldn't take in the foundling pup. She found a temporary home for him in Ft. Collins.

Baca said in a Monday phone call that Max, his 1.5 year old Pekingese was living with his mom in Trinidad and staying for the weekend with his grandmother, who also lives in Trinidad, when Max somehow got lost. Baca, who lives in Ft. Collins, got word from his grandmother that Max had been found and was at the Larimer County Humane Society in Ft. Collins. He said he was very pleased that his dog was safe.

"He's a very good and loyal dog, and I'm very pleased to have him back," Baca said.

Albinana said Baca retrieved his dog on Thursday. She said she was glad that the story had a happy ending.

"Anything could have happened to him out there on that highway," Albinana said. "I'm just glad he's back home with the people who love him. It feels very good to have helped get him back home."

Anyone who finds an apparently lost animal at a time when Noah's Ark is closed can call the Trinidad Police Department at 719-846-4441, to make sure the animal is properly cared for.

 transitioned peacefully to her next journey on January 3, 2015. She was 90 years old.

Angie was born on June 17 in Delagua, Colo. to James and Teresa (Tortorelli) Biundo. She was one of seven surviving children. She attended Trinidad schools. She assisted her family on the family farm and helped run the Biundo Sandwich Shop in Pueblo, Colo. On April 11, 1948, she was united in marriage to Benny F. Naccarato. They had one girl, Marie.

Benny and Angie ran the Isis Theatre in Downtown Trinidad, along with the Naccarato family. After the theatre closed, Angie became a well-known fixture in Trinidad's downtown retail community, working as a clerk at several local stores. She was employed at Jolten's Department Store, Hausman's Drug Store and Riverside Drug for several years. She retired from Riverside Drug when the store closed. She and Ben enjoyed their retirement together until Ben's death in 1993.

At that time, Angie began a new career, at age 70, that greatly enriched the lives of children in Las Animas County. Angie became a teacher's aide at Trinidad HeadStart through the Foster Grandparent program. "Grandma Angie" was loved by many children, many of whom continued to visit her long after their years at HeadStart. She was loved by staff and parents at the program, as well. She had a special way with troubled and special needs children who blossomed and flourished under her love and kindness. She loved each of the children in her classes and they truly made Grandma Angie's life as special as she made theirs.

Angie was known in the community for her incredible baking ability. She was often asked by family and friends to bake her traditional Italian cookies for weddings, showers and graduations. Her biscottis, wine cookies, kiflins and scaledes were legendary. She, along with family and friends, undertook the task of baking cookies for the weddings of her granddaughters. With beaming pride, she made over 100 different types of traditional Italian cookies and pastries for both weddings, an amazing gesture that was treasured by her family and friends.

Angie had a special love for her grandchildren. She spent much time caring for and showering love upon her grandchildren. Her loving gestures were constant whether it meant spending time together, caring for them or having Sunday dinner on the table each week. There was a special love between Angie and her grandchildren and she will be greatly missed by them.

TIME FOR A VACATION

Strong dollar makes world travel cheaper for Americans

By DAVID KOENIG
 AP Airlines Writer

DALLAS (AP)—Trips in Europe or Asia should be cheaper for Americans this year.

Thank a stronger dollar.

Since the middle of last year, it has been gaining against the euro, the British pound, the Swiss franc, the Russian ruble, the Indian rupee, the Japanese yen and other currencies.

That means dollars go further in those countries, reducing the price of everything from a hotel room to a glass of beer.

"This is one of the best times for Americans to travel in years," says Matt Kepnes, author of "Travel the World on $50 a Day" and other travel books.

WHY THE DOLLAR IS STRONG

Other economies are shaky, making their currencies less valuable. Europe is barely growing. Japan is already officially in recession. China's growth has slowed. Meanwhile, the U.S. economy has been chugging along. Many economists expect that steady U.S. growth will compel the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates later this year, making dollar investments more attractive and leading traders to sell other currencies and buy dollars.

WHAT IT MEANS

Let's say that in June you had a charming dinner for two in Paris for 75 euros. First, congratulations. Second, it cost $103 then; today it would be $89. Expensive countries may not be cheap, but at least they're more affordable now.

BEST BARGAINS

Thanks to the pound's decline, England is cheaper than it was six months ago. But the euro has slumped more, making most of continental Europe an even better bargain.

Travel writer Kepnes says Greece is attractive right now because hotels and tour operators have been slashing prices to fill rooms. The same thing is happening in Portugal and parts of Spain.

"Be the contrarian traveler," Kepnes says. "If you want to go to Europe, consider eastern or central Europe, where prices are generally cheaper," he says. He recommends going during the "shoulder season" — late spring or early fall — rather than in summer, which is peak season.

WHEN TO BOOK A FLIGHT

Demand for travel is so strong that most airlines don't have to cut prices to sell seats.

"The summer fares are still very expensive," says George Hobica, founder of travel website airfarewatchdog.com. But airlines might cut prices this spring if the strong dollar discourages Europeans and Asians from flying to and from the U.S.

CONSIDER ALL THE OPTIONS

Hobica recommends checking foreign airlines. He says Etihad, Qatar Airways, Turkish Airlines and others sometimes offer better prices to Europe than U.S. carriers do, although they could include a distant stopover.

AP Markets Writer Matthew Craft in New York contributed to this report.

Littering the stage behind Director Vaugeois were gigantic flash cards of words much like the ones in the previous paragraph; a visual tool for probing deep discussion of their meaning in theatre and use in life. This was beginning lesson no. 1.

According to SCRT's prospectus, the classes are appropriate for people age 10 to adult. Descriptions on the flyer hint at an awesome journey ahead. Requirements cited are good reading skills, strong work ethic and some performance experience. The course will be fast paced and intense. Sounds like an exciting train to get aboard as it hugs along to the top of the mountain where await the grease-paint and the roar of the crowd.

For more information, call the SCRT office, 10-4, Monday through Friday, 946-4765 or drop by the office at 131 West Main Street in Trinidad.
